About This Content

The tiny airport, the thrilling approach, the narrow margin between a good landing and a landing which ends in the perimeter fence: they make Kastellorizo a special destination for every pilot.

'The Aegean Pearl' has been recreated in its entirety for FSX: Steam Edition, including the rough mountains, the unique airport and the village of Kastellorizo itself. Every house in the village, the town hall, school, churches, hotels, bars, chapels, military installations and much more have been realistically recreated, and the shape of the whole island has been modelled manually in order to accurately recreate its outline.

Kastellorizo Airport (LGKJ) is rendered in high-detail, including a paved runway and apron, detailed models of the terminal buildings, realistic night lighting and more details like baggage carts, animated flags and passengers. Just like the real airport, there are no nav aids (apart from the NDB) or ILS installed at the airport. Pilots have to call Info at 122.90 to avoid conflicts with other aircraft.

Be sure to watch out for the fences at both ends of the runway!

This is excellent. This closely resembles the real life island with many landmarks to see. Great for its price. However you will need either Thessalonica or another Mediterranean airport as this place can only really take general aviation. I did manage to squeeze in the PMDG JS41, Majestic Dash 8 Q400 and even a Boeing 737-800 but barely.. A great little FSX airport not bad for the price a few bugs but very very minor buy when on sale!. It's absolutely beautiful scenery.

The only problem is that all buildings in the town are "floating" 1-2 m above the "zero-level" ground (sea-level), so it's not possible to land a helicopter on the streets of the town - you sink 2 m below the terrain... hope it's easy to fix this mistake.
